

$VALORIS

Your suffering had valor. Now it has proof.

RECOGNITION ON-CHAIN · BUILT ON SOLANA

Whitepaper v2.1 · November 2026

$VALORIS

Un Registro de Reconocimiento para las Víctimas del Bullying — y el token que puede seguirlo

Whitepaper v2.1

> "Soy padre. Cada niño y adolescente que pierde la vida o sufre a causa del acoso escolar me duele personalmente. Enseño y crío a mis hijos para que no sean ni agresores ni víctimas. Pero enseñar a uno o dos no es suficiente: el mundo necesita un mecanismo que reconozca lo que millones de niños y familias cargan en silencio. Ese mecanismo es $VALORIS."
>
> "I am a father. Every child and adolescent who loses their life or suffers because of bullying hurts me personally. I raise my children to be neither aggressors nor victims. But raising one or two is not enough — the world needs a mechanism to recognize what millions of children and families carry in silence. That mechanism is $VALORIS."
>
> — Fundador / Founder

La Historia del Fundador / Founder's Story

Me decían "chupa cabras."

Tenía los dientes frontales separados y ese apodo se convirtió en mi identidad durante años de escuela. En ese entonces el bullying no tenía nombre — era simplemente "cosas de niños", algo que uno cargaba solo y en silencio, sin saber el daño que estaba causando por dentro.

Nunca le conté a mi mamá.

En la adolescencia me puse ortodoncia. No porque alguien me lo sugiriera por razones de salud — sino porque algo dentro de mí necesitaba corregir lo que ellos habían convertido en defecto. Hoy uso carillas. Y todavía, de adulto, me cuestiono mi cuerpo frente al espejo.

Eso es lo que hace el bullying: no desaparece cuando termina la escuela. Se instala silenciosamente en las decisiones que tomas años después, en cómo te ves, en lo que nunca le dijiste a nadie.

$VALORIS nació de esa historia. La mía. Y la de cientos de millones que nunca tuvieron con quién contarla.

They called me "chupa cabras" — a cruel nickname mocking the gap between my front teeth. That name became my identity for years of school. Back then, bullying had no name — it was just "kids being kids", something you carried alone and in silence, without knowing the damage it was doing inside.

I never told my mother.

As a teenager, I got braces. Not because anyone suggested it for health reasons — but because something inside me needed to fix what they had turned into a flaw. Today I wear veneers. And still, as an adult, I question my own body in the mirror.

That is what bullying does: it doesn't disappear when school ends. It installs itself silently into the decisions you make years later, into how you see yourself, into the things you never told anyone.

$VALORIS was born from that story. Mine. And from the hundreds of millions who never had anyone to tell it to.

Tabla de Contenido / Table of Contents

1. The Problem
2. The Human Cost Nobody Accounts For
3. The Gap: What Does Not Exist
4. The Solution: $VALORIS
5. How It Works — The Recognition Flows
6. Tokenomics
7. Roadmap
8. Technical Architecture
9. The Mission Beyond the Token

---

1. The Problem

Bullying is not a rite of passage. It is not something people simply "get over." It is a systematic form of abuse with measurable, long-lasting consequences — and it affects more human beings than most recognized global crises.

$VALORIS addresses two interconnected realities:

Primary focus: School bullying. Children and adolescents are the most vulnerable targets. The power imbalance, the captive social environment of school, and the developmental stage of the victims make school bullying a particularly destructive form of abuse. A child who is mocked, excluded, or physically harmed during their formative years carries those wounds into adulthood — often without ever naming them.

Secondary focus: Adult bullying. The cruelty does not end with graduation. Adults face systematic mockery and humiliation for their bodies, their physical features, their personality, their beliefs, and their ways of thinking. Workplace bullying, social exclusion, and body shaming are forms of the same violence — and their impact is equally real, equally damaging, and equally unrecognized by existing systems.

The numbers are unambiguous:

A 2025 global meta-analysis covering 116 studies and over 603,000 participants found that 1 in 4 children worldwide is a victim of bullying — more than 600 million children and adolescents currently experiencing repeated humiliation, exclusion, or psychological abuse.

- 19.2% of U.S. students report being bullied (CDC, 2025)
- 44.4% of adolescents with developmental disabilities are bullied — nearly double the general rate
- 1 in 5 internet users globally is at risk of cyberbullying or online harassment
- 41% of adults in the United States have faced some form of online harassment
- A 50-year longitudinal study in the United Kingdom found that childhood bullying affects psychological health, educational achievement, physical health, and social functioning decades into adulthood

These are not abstract statistics. Behind each number is a child who stopped eating lunch in the cafeteria. A teenager who deleted all their social media. An adult who still questions their body in the mirror — and never told anyone why.

---

2. The Human Cost Nobody Accounts For

The Victims

Children and adults who are bullied experience elevated rates of depression, anxiety, and deep damage to self-esteem. They develop sleep disorders, chronic health complaints, and lasting changes in how they see themselves and their bodies. The trauma is real, clinically documented, and often untreated — particularly in families who cannot afford psychological care.

The Parents of Victims

Research with parents of bullied children reveals a consistent pattern: bullying victimization is a major source of chronic stress for the entire family. Parents experience guilt, rage, sadness, and helplessness. Many adopt maladaptive responses — some retaliate, some overprotect, some collapse into self-blame. The entire family unit absorbs the damage.

The Parents of Aggressors

One of the most invisible layers of the bullying crisis: the parents of those who bully rarely process the situation emotionally at all. The most common reactions are denial ("my child would never do that"), minimization ("kids will be kids"), or blame-shifting. This denial is not simply moral failure — it is a psychological pattern often rooted in the same dynamics that produced the bullying behavior in the first place.

The Aggressors Who Grew Up

Many adults carry unresolved guilt for bullying behavior from their childhood or adolescence. This guilt is real, undischarged, and has no formal channel for expression or reparation. There is no mechanism in the world that allows a former aggressor to say — with tangible, verifiable consequence — "What I did was wrong, and I am taking responsibility."

Until now.

---

3. The Gap: What Does Not Exist

Society has developed mechanisms to recognize and compensate many forms of harm:

- Legal systems award damages for personal injury
- Insurance covers health and property losses
- Foundations and NGOs provide disaster relief

But for one of the most widespread forms of psychological harm in human history — systematic bullying affecting hundreds of millions across every age group — there is no recognition mechanism. No reparation pathway. No record of what was taken.

Victims heal — if they heal — in silence, alone, and at their own expense.

Aggressors move on — carrying guilt with no constructive outlet.

Parents suffer — in isolation, without community, without validation.

$VALORIS exists to close this gap.

---

4. The Solution: $VALORIS

$VALORIS is a public recognition registry built on the Solana blockchain, designed for everyone affected by bullying — victims, survivors, parents, reformed aggressors, and allies.

The name is intentional and bilingual:
- In English: valor means courage — the courage it takes to survive, to speak, to heal.
- In Spanish: valor means both courage and worth/value — "tu sufrimiento tuvo valor." Your suffering had worth.

$VALORIS rests on three pillars that do not depend on each other to matter:

1. Recognition — permanent and priceless. When someone sends $VALORIS to a victim, they send a verifiable, permanent, blockchain-recorded statement: "I see what happened to you. I recognize it. And this record is forever." This is the heart of the project. The recognition is the record, not the price. Like a medal whose metal has a market value but whose meaning never fluctuates, the proof that someone was seen is permanent regardless of what any token is worth on any given day.

2. Funding — powered by allies, not victims. Every transaction carries a small fee that builds the Therapy Foundation Fund, which will pay for real psychological care for bullying victims in schools. This is funded by allies and supporters who believe bullying is wrong and choose to back the mission. Victims receive recognition; they are never asked to buy anything. The person taking financial risk is always someone who can afford it and understands it. The vulnerable person is always the beneficiary, never the investor.

3. Community — survivors, parents, and allies connected. A network of people who understand what others cannot. This value exists whether the token is worth one dollar or one cent.

The test that defines this project

If $VALORIS dropped to zero tomorrow, would it still have done good?

Yes, without ambiguity. The recognition records would remain permanently on-chain. Whatever therapy the Foundation funded would already have reached children. The community would already exist. The good this project does never depends on the token's price. That is the north star, and everything is designed so the answer to that question is always yes.

This is not an investment. It is not a substitute for professional therapy. No one should ever spend more than they can afford to lose. Anyone in crisis should reach out to real mental health support. $VALORIS is a layer of recognition and a funding mechanism for a mission, nothing more and nothing less.

5. How It Works — The Recognition Flows

The Principle of Public Recognition

Bullying rarely happens in secret. Its power comes precisely from being public — the mockery in front of classmates, the nickname repeated in the hallway, the humiliation witnessed by others who said nothing. The damage is collective even though the victim carries it alone.

$VALORIS inverts that logic with the same currency.

Just as the abuse was public, the recognition is public. Every $VALORIS transfer is permanently recorded on the Solana blockchain — visible to anyone in the world, at any time, forever. There is no way to erase it, deny it, or rewrite it.

When a former aggressor sends $VALORIS to someone they harmed — that act is public.
When a parent tells their child "I believe you and this is real" — that act is public.
When a survivor reaches out to a current victim — that act is public.

What bullying did in public, $VALORIS repairs in public.

The blockchain is not merely technology in this project — it is the permanent witness that the world never gave to victims.

The Recognition Flows

Flow 1: Aggressor → Victim
A former bully sends $VALORIS directly to someone they harmed. The transaction is permanent and public on the blockchain. For the victim: a recorded acknowledgment that what happened was real and wrong. For the aggressor: a concrete, verifiable act of accountability. This is a powerful symbolic act, offered freely, never required.

Flow 2: Parent → Child Victim
A parent who witnesses their child's suffering sends $VALORIS to validate their pain. The child receives a permanent, blockchain-recorded statement from their own parent: "I believe you. I see you. This is real."

Flow 3: Survivor → Current Victim
An adult who survived bullying sends $VALORIS to a child or young person currently going through it. The message: "I made it. You will too. And this token is my word."

Flow 4: Parent → Parent
A parent who lived through their child's bullying sends $VALORIS to another parent currently in that pain. A community of people who understand what no one else can fully understand.

Flow 5: Victim → Victim
Peer recognition within the community. Survivors validating each other. No institution needed — only the shared truth of what was experienced.

Flow 6: External Ally → Community
People who were never victims or aggressors but who believe bullying is wrong and want to stand against it. By purchasing and holding $VALORIS, they fund the Therapy Foundation and the entire ecosystem. The allies carry the financial side so the victims never have to. This is the engine of the project.

---

6. Tokenomics

This section applies only if Phase 3 launches. The token is gated behind three public thresholds — 500 active members, 2 collaborators with defined roles, 50 recognitions recorded. Until then, there is no token; the registry (section 5) operates on its own.

Total Supply: 1,000,000,000 $VALORIS — One Billion tokens. Fixed. No inflation. No additional minting. Ever.

Allocation	%	Amount	Details
Public / Community	45%	450,000,000	Open market, liquidity, community access
Therapy Foundation Fund	25%	250,000,000	Locked 24 months, then released gradually to fund school mental health programs
Ecosystem & Partnerships	15%	150,000,000	NGOs, psychologists, schools, anti-bullying organizations
Founder	10%	100,000,000	36-month vesting — zero liquidity at launch
Operations & Development	5%	50,000,000	Infrastructure, development, founder compensation (see below)

On the Founder Allocation

The founder is the sole builder, voice, strategist, and operator of $VALORIS — without salary, without external investors, without a team. The 10% allocation with 36-month vesting reflects that responsibility. It represents less than half the industry standard for a solo founder — a deliberate choice that prioritizes the Therapy Foundation and the community over personal return.

The founder will not touch a single token at launch.

On the Operations Fund

Of the 5% Operations and Development fund, up to 40% may be used as founder compensation during the pre-revenue phase — payment for the real, daily work of building and running this project. The remaining 60% covers technical infrastructure, legal structure, and operational costs. All use of this fund is reported publicly every quarter. Nothing is hidden.

Transfer Fee Mechanism

Every $VALORIS transaction carries an automatic 1.5% fee, enforced at the protocol level by Solana's Token-2022 standard:

- 1.0% → Therapy Foundation wallet (public, auditable on-chain in real time)
- 0.5% → Operations and development

This is not a promise. It is a blockchain guarantee — no one can disable or redirect it, including the founder.

The foundation builds itself, one transaction at a time.

---

7. Roadmap

Updated November 2026. The registry comes first; the token is gated behind three public thresholds.

Phase 1 — Recognition Registry (now)

- Anyone can send a permanent, non-transferable on-chain recognition to a victim
- Free for the sender — VALORIS sponsors the network cost from a public sponsor wallet
- Public registry page; public Therapy Fund wallet for ally donations
- No token involved

Phase 2 — Community & Collaborators

- Reach three public thresholds: 500 active members · 2 collaborators with defined roles · 50 recognitions recorded
- Onboard mental-health professionals, survivors with a voice, and a technical collaborator
- Content in monthly batches; recognition campaign #IRecognizeYou / #TeReconozco

Phase 3 — Token (gated)

- Launches only when all three thresholds are met
- Solana Token-2022 with the 1.5% transfer fee to the Therapy Fund, as described in section 6
- If the thresholds are never met, the registry keeps working without a token

Phase 4 — The Foundation

- Establish the Therapy Fund as a legal entity
- First funded therapy sessions — fully transparent, on-chain traceable
- Annual public impact report: how many children received care

---

8. Technical Architecture

Blockchain: Solana
Selected for near-zero transaction costs (under $0.001 per transaction) and speed (~65,000 TPS). This matters: if sending a recognition token costs $15 in fees, no parent will do it. On Solana, anyone can.

Token Standard: Solana Token-2022
The Token-2022 program includes native extensions that make $VALORIS's mechanics possible without custom smart contracts:

- Transfer Fee Extension — Automatically routes 1.5% of every transaction to designated wallets. Enforced at protocol level, not a promise.
- Metadata Extension — Allows recognition messages to be attached to transfers on-chain, making each transaction a permanent human statement, not just a number.

Transparency:
All wallets — Foundation Fund, Ecosystem, Operations — are public Solana addresses, viewable by anyone on the blockchain explorer in real time. Every token in every wallet is visible. Every disbursement is permanent.

Decentralization:
$VALORIS is a community token. No central authority controls transfers or recognition flows. The founder cannot freeze wallets, reverse transactions, or alter the fee mechanism after deployment.

---

9. The Mission Beyond the Token

$VALORIS is not trying to be the next speculative asset.

It is trying to do something that has never been done: build a transparent way to bring real therapy to bullied children, while giving every victim a permanent record that their suffering was seen. The foundation comes first. The token is the engine that funds it and the certificate that records the recognition. It is never the product.

The world already knows bullying is wrong. Surveys, studies, documentaries, campaigns — the awareness is there. What has been missing is a mechanism that converts awareness into action, action into recognition, and recognition into a permanent record that a victim can hold and point to for the rest of their life.

Every transaction in the $VALORIS ecosystem is a vote against bullying — cast with something that costs the voter something real.

Every token received by a victim is a permanent, immutable statement that their suffering was seen, acknowledged, and responded to — not by an algorithm, but by a human being who chose to act.

Every fee collected by the Foundation is a brick in a structure that will eventually mean a child — somewhere, in a school that cannot afford a psychologist — gets the help they need to heal.

This is the mission.
This is $VALORIS.

Community

X (Twitter): @VALORIStoken
Telegram: t.me/valoristoken
Website: (coming soon)

$VALORIS is not a registered security and this whitepaper is not financial advice. $VALORIS is not an investment and not a substitute for professional mental health care. Cryptocurrency carries significant risk; never spend more than you can afford to lose. If you or someone you know is in crisis, please reach out to a qualified mental health professional or a local crisis line. Victims receive recognition freely and are never asked to purchase anything. The financial side of this project is carried by allies and supporters who understand and accept that risk.

Whitepaper v2.1 — Built on Solana. Built for humans.